

Motivations

Writing is hard, because thinking is hard.

Writing is distilling what you think into a 1D space. It is a form of turning a net into a line: when you write you are performing a linear walk through your networked thoughts. However, perform a dimensionality reduction that often traps writers in their creative valleys.

morph breaks this gridlock by adding back dimensionalities that helps writers traverse the gap between the richness of thoughts to linear prose.

It offers a file-over-app text interface, with dynamic inference graph powered by thinking and language model, but with more VIBES

But don't take our word for it, here are from some of our initial user testing:

morph makes writing fun again! -

novice writer

*Write through your blocks, not around them
- engineer writer*

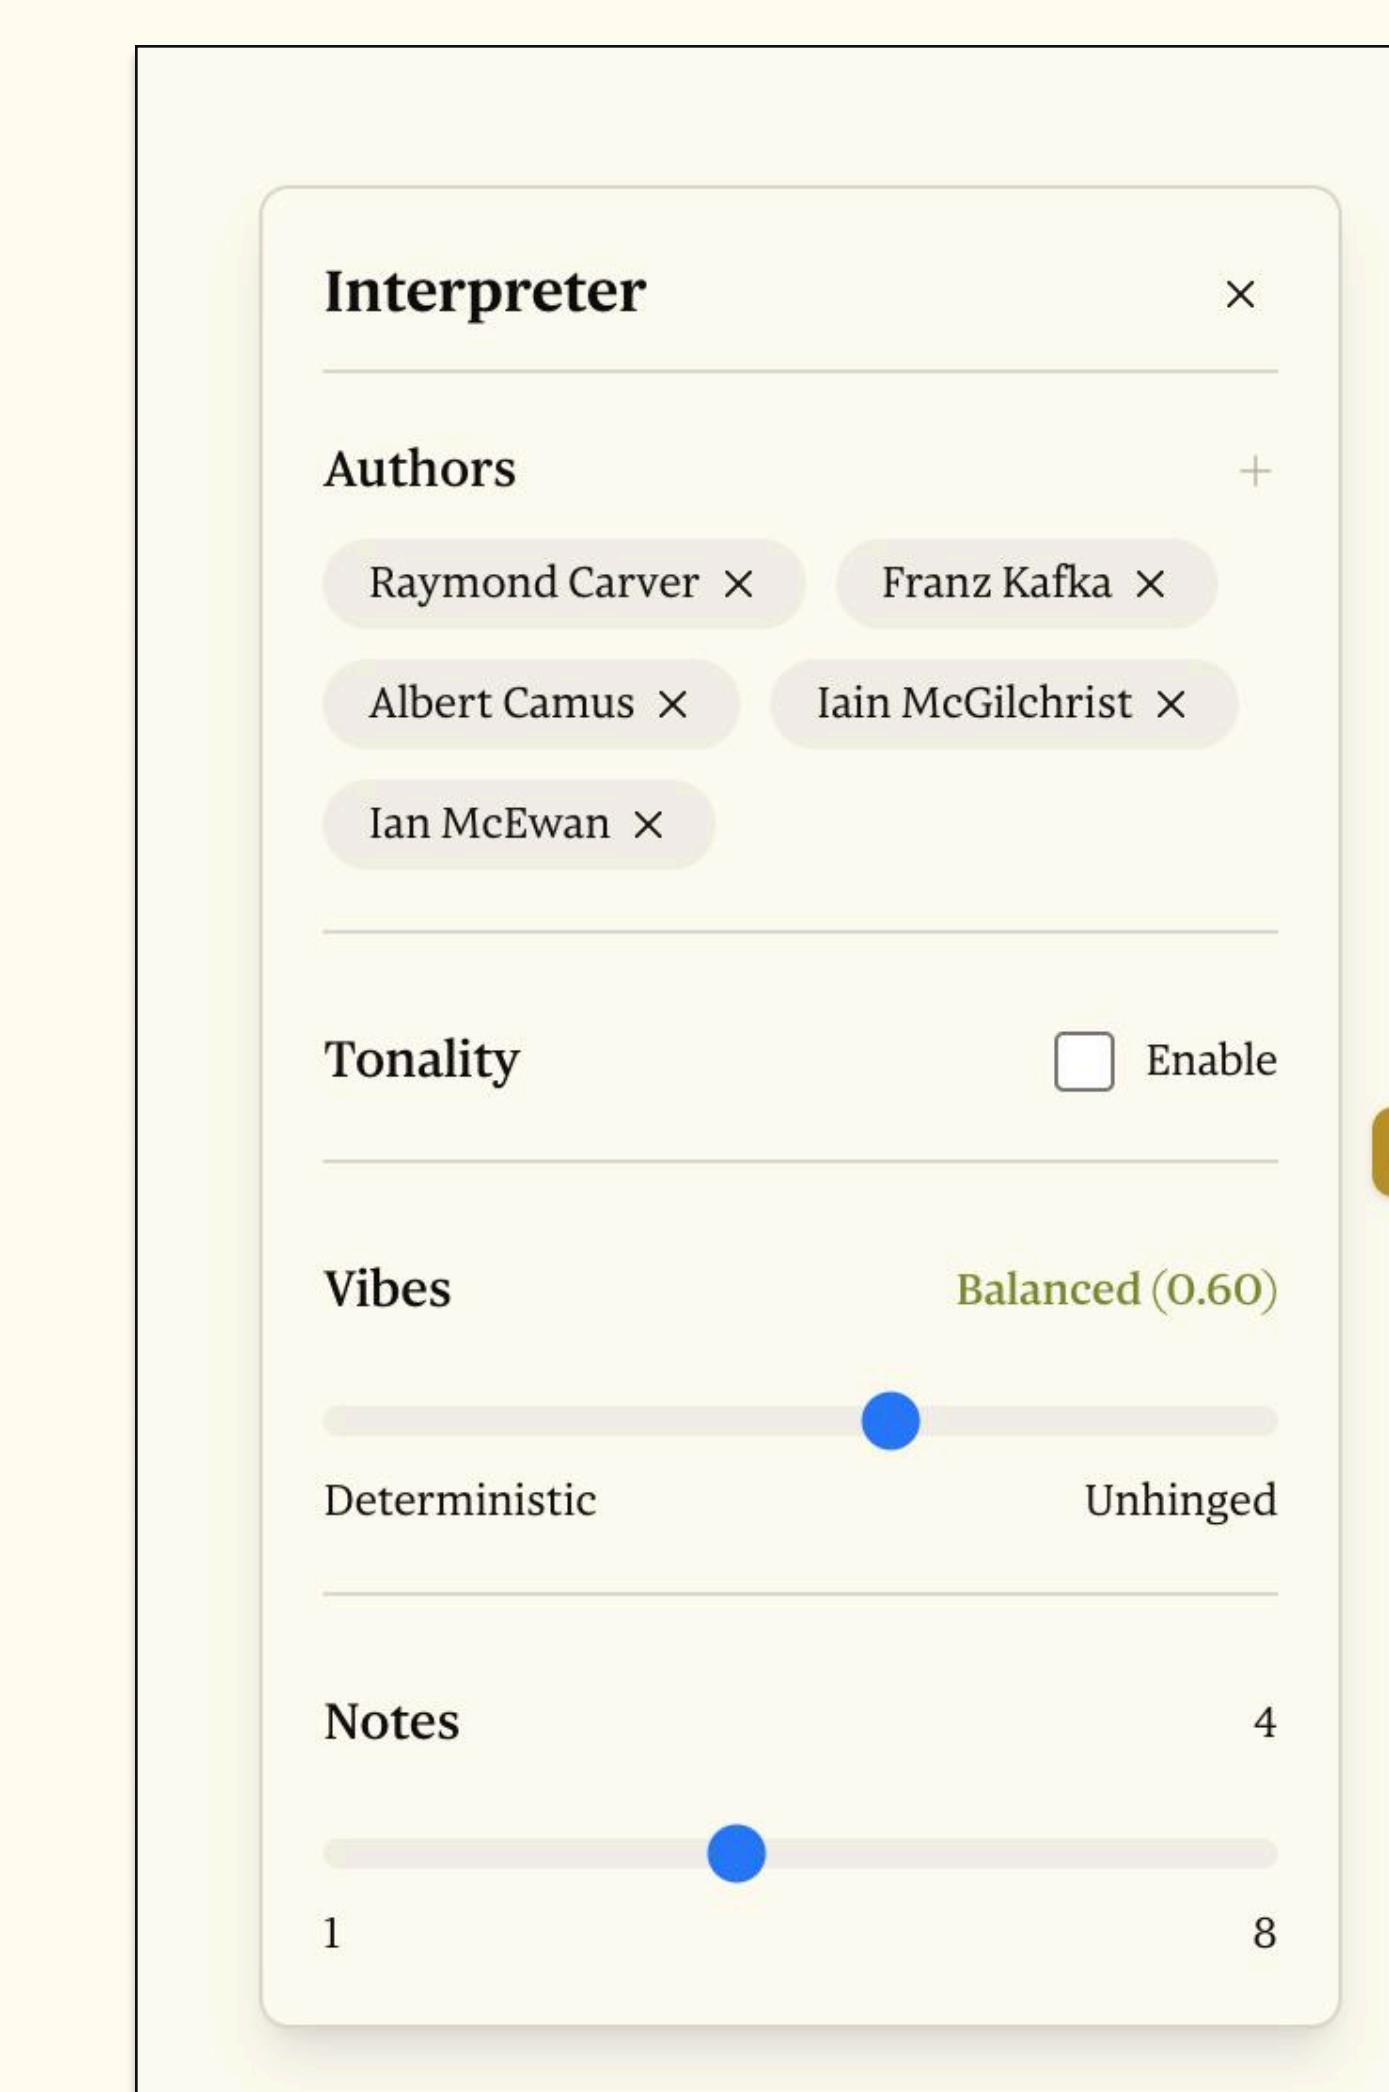

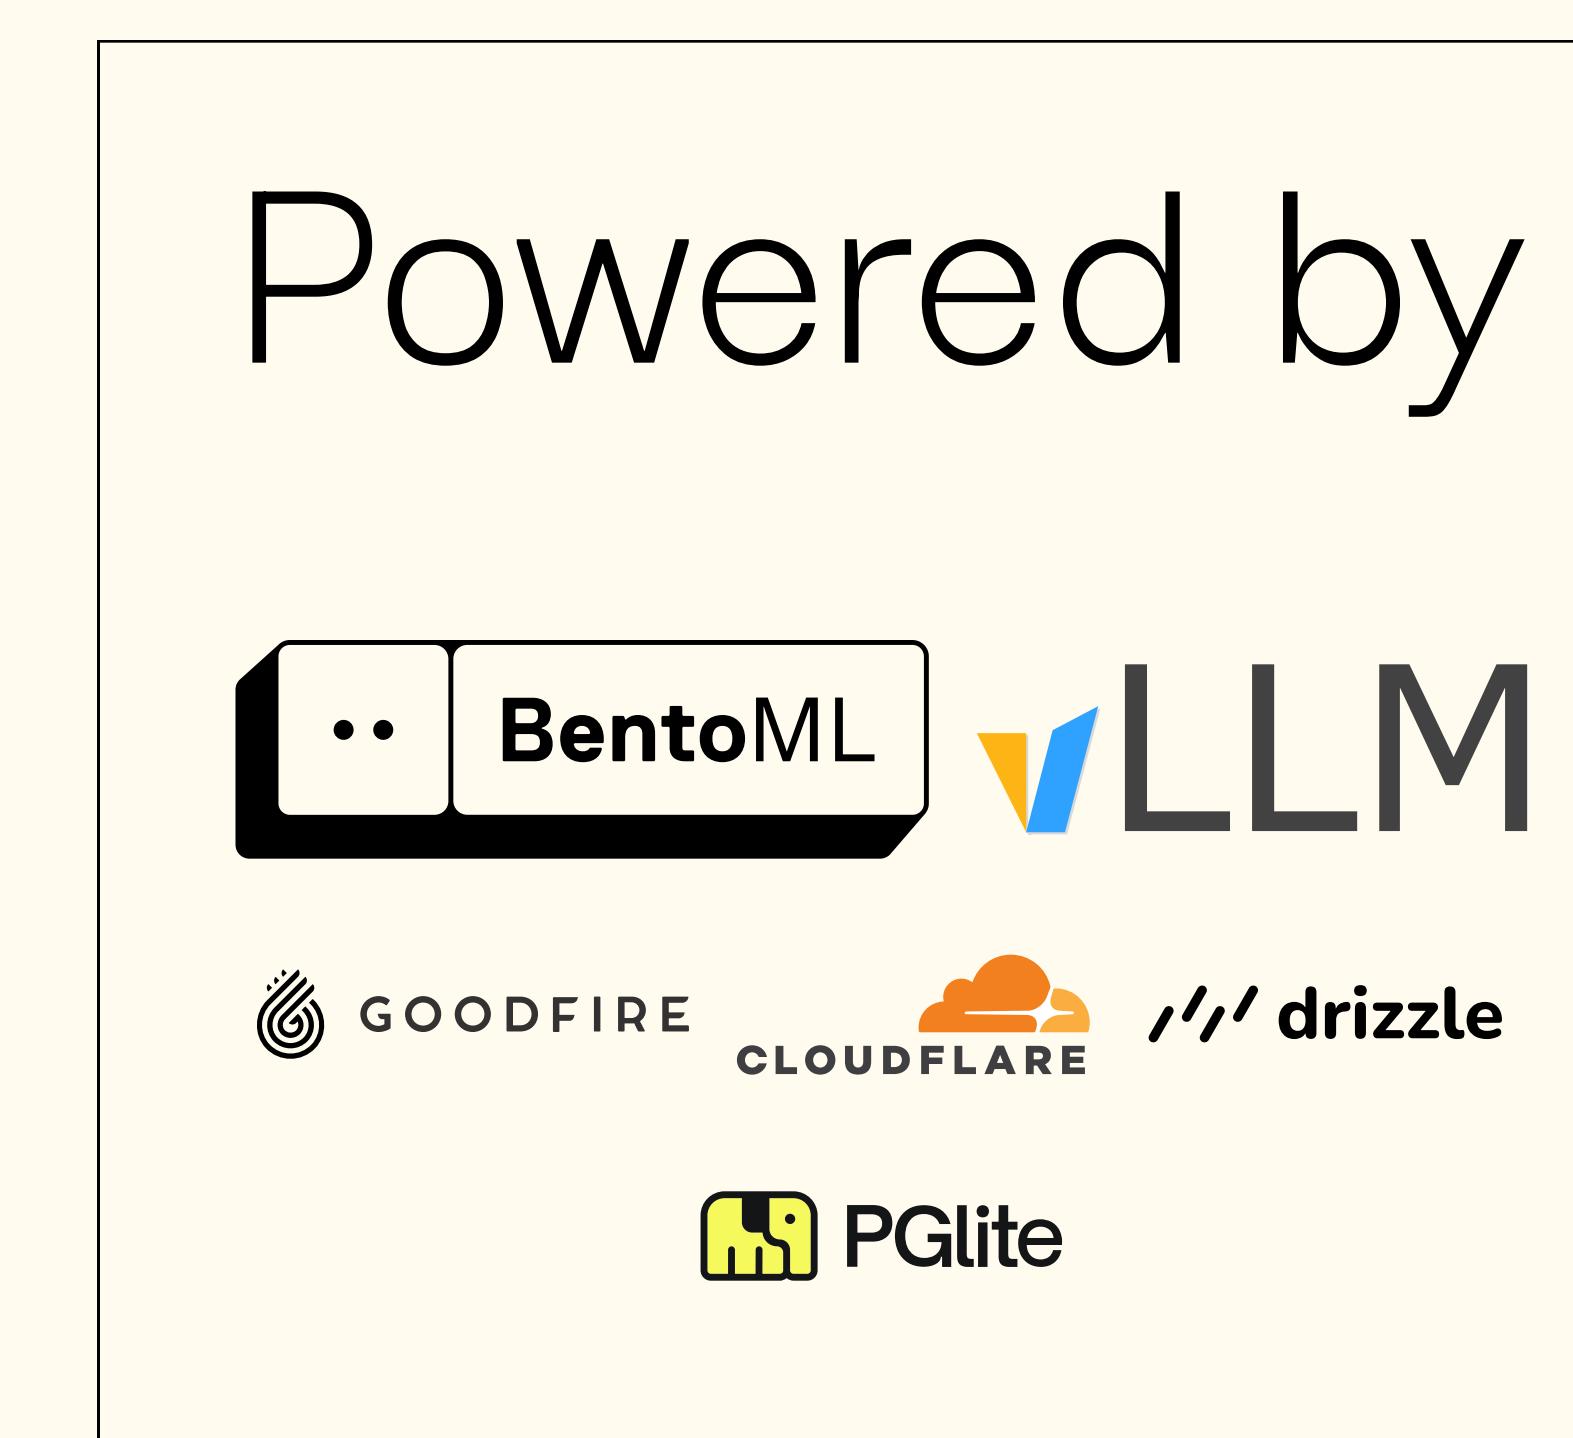

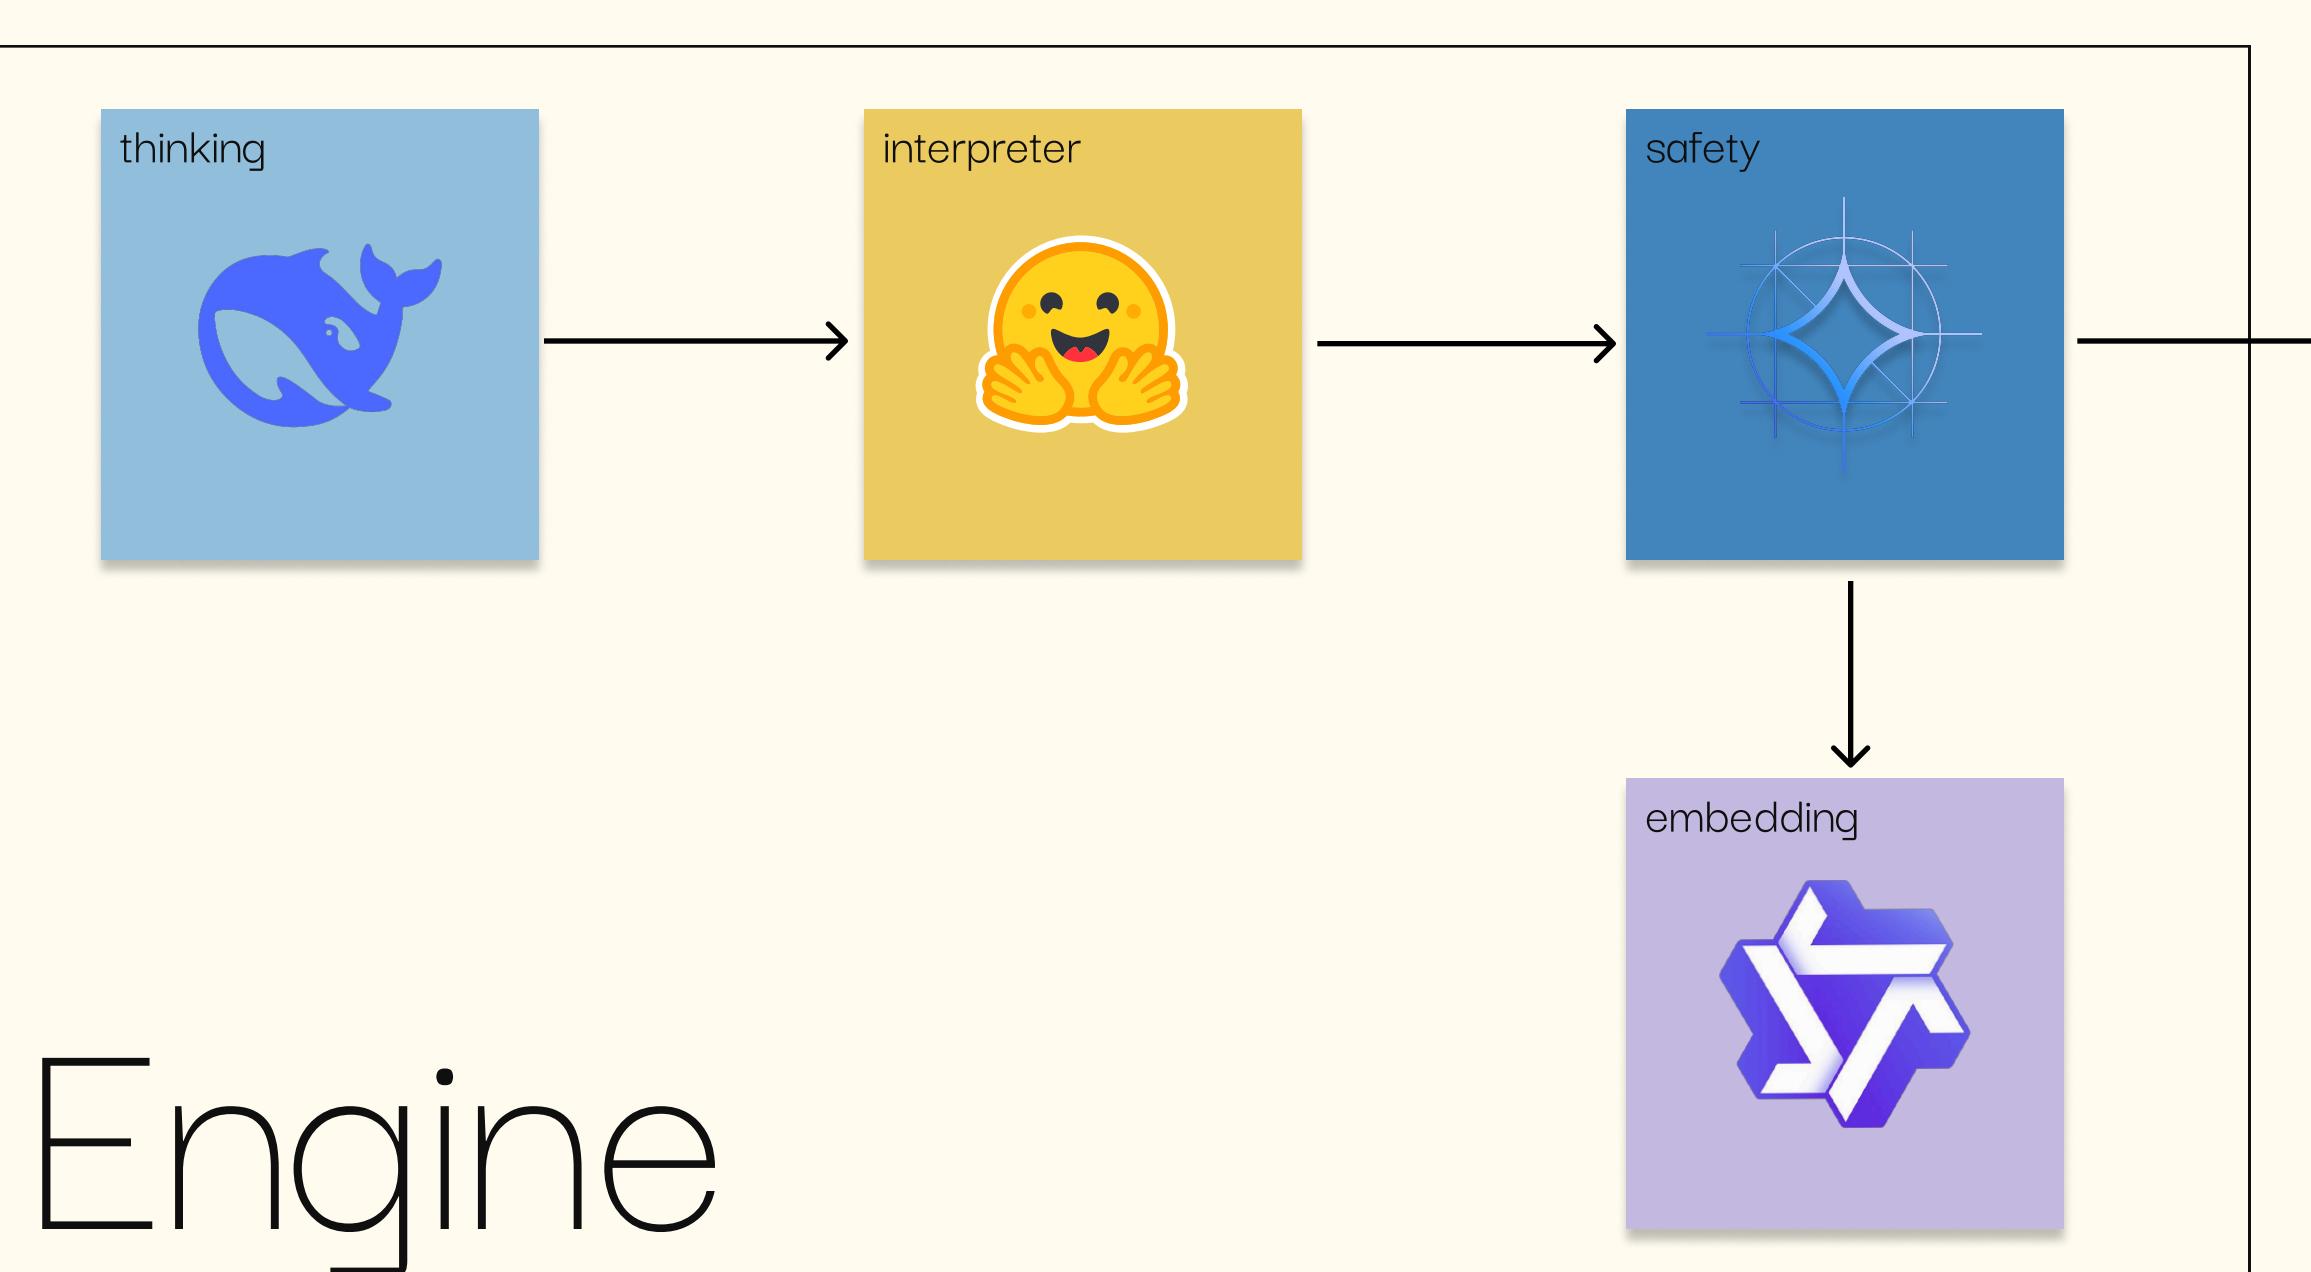

*A writing companion that works!
- experienced writer*

Engineering Overview

tiny morph generates context-aware suggestions based on user writing.

It performs semantic search for potential sections to apply these notes.

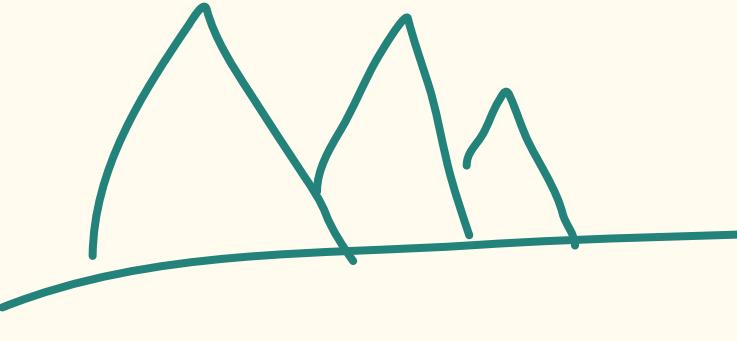

Minimalist, simple

Just start typing, no complex UX

Available on desktop @ morph-editor.app

Features

It is Valentine, and I don't have any plans.

tags: love, growth, on loneliness, Jungian, Isonian love, and belongings.
date: 2023-02-14
social: 1

This is the first in a series where I want to delve deeper into the topics of relationship. The first part is an exploration into Jung's archetypes and how love is a mutual becoming.

I [posts/images/leidenfully-murice-dent-erotones-du-cap-mis-ne-1904.webp] [Environs du cap Misene (1904)] I've been thinking over this all morning, wondering what I want to write about love - the state that morphs into every sort of love's consciousness - romantic, platonic, familial, etc. What do I really know about it? Less than 10 lines, more than I admit. I went to grab a coffee earlier today. The barista knows my order by now - Latte, oat milk, hot. Today she slides over not just my drink but a small envelope, worn at the edges like it's been carried around for a while. Her eyes meet mine for just a moment longer than usual. "Someone left this for you," she says, then turns to the next customer. Inside, three words in unfamiliar handwriting: Love is coming.

I stand there, coffee cooling, envelope light in my hands. Part of me wants to ask who left it, when, why. The other part understands that some gifts are meant to stay mysteries. Like finding a dollar bill in a old coat pocket, or hearing your favorite song on a stranger's radio - some moments of grace are better left unexplained. I pocket the note. Outside, February wind cuts through my jacket. But I'm thinking about how strange it is, how a few words from an unknown hand can make a person feel, alone in the times of a loneliness epidemic.

Asynchronous Markdown Renderer

Add more sensory details to the coffee shop scene, focusing on the tactile and olfactory experiences, to create a more vivid setting that contrasts with the protagonist's internal reflections, heightening the emotional impact.

Enhance the psychological depth of the self-love section by introducing a metaphor that symbolizes the journey towards self-acceptance, such as a journey or a transformation, to make the concept more relatable and vivid.

Context-aware notes

shed scheming for 32 seconds
I need to help improve this excerpt based on this. The user has provided a detailed excerpt along with four suggestions for enhancement. They've also provided specific instructions on how to approach the task, analyzing the style, core concepts, and adapting it to certain authors.

I'll start by understanding the overall style and tone of the excerpt. The writing is reflective and philosophical, drawing personal anecdotes with psychological themes. It has a contemplative tone, exploring themes of love, loss, and self-discovery. The author uses metaphors effectively, such as the envelope with the message "Love is coming," which serves as a catalyst for reflection.

At the core, the excerpt delves into human psychology, discussing projections, the shadow, and the concept of balancing. It also touches on existential themes like mortality and the search for meaning.

Reasoning and structured outputs

Benefits

Steerable generations: Semantically based on tonality and your own writing style. Fully customisable and scalable to your liking

Privacy-first: Everything is within the browser, even databases. No data are being saved or collected. What is yours is truly yours!

User-centric interface: Built on top simple text editor heuristic, offers an intuitive experience that just feels, familiar and cozy. With all of your favourite keybinding supported!

Efficient serving infrastructure: State-of-the-art features and best practices (structured outputs, chain-of-thoughts reasoning, optimised KV caching) from industry practitioners for serving high performance engines

Make it yours: Include you in every step of its way, Let you fully control your writing process, and enhance your agency

Acknowledgement

Aaron

We want to express our gratitude to Dr. Swati Mishra for her unwavering patience and guidance in helping us explore AI-native interfaces

Team

Aaron Pham

Nebras Khan

Waleed Malik

Lucas Li